

One Site Wales

One Site Wales is a research delivery model where multiple locations or Health Boards all contribute to a study as one national delivery team, with one shared recruitment target.

SYMPLIFY

"For a small country, Wales has again punched above its weight with the number of participants recruited. This is a huge and important contribution from the people of Wales to research efforts to tackle COVID-19."

*Prof Andrew Carson-Stevens
Health and Care Research Wales Specialty Lead for Primary Care*

"I am delighted to see Wales come together to coordinate the opening of this trial across 5 site specific cancer pathways, in 6 health boards within an accelerated time line and coordinated through a leading "One Wales" NHS organisation – in this case Velindre University NHS Trust – creating a One Wales approach in terms of engagement with the Sponsor, Oxford University."

*Prof Tom Crosby
National Clinical Director for Cancer in Wales*

Listen

"The One Site Wales model changed the way we are able to deliver the LISTEN study, providing all patients in Wales access to the trial and enabling use of the central booking support which has been critical."

*Prof Monica Busse
LISTEN Co-Chief Investigator*

One Wales Study Delivery

One Wales Delivery models provide the sponsor with a single point of contact for sites in Wales.

Use of the One Site Wales approach improves the equity of access to trials for the Welsh population.

The introduction of an all-Wales recruitment target provides sites with flexibility in the delivery of studies.

The One Wales approach encourages collaborative working to overcome challenges, with a focus on shared learning particularly relevant to the care pathways in Wales.

Once for Wales study setup

One costing and contract negotiation with the lead site

Agreements accepted by all participating organisations in Wales

